Associate Professor Faculty Position in Early Childhood/ELLs and Biliteracy Development

The Department of Teaching, Learning and Culture in the College of Education and Human Development at Texas A&M University is seeking a tenure-track Associate Professor of early childhood education, with research interests in biliteracy and language development among young English Language Learners. Professional duties will include teaching early childhood education (ECE) and literacy and language courses at graduate and undergraduate levels; developing and maintaining an active research and publication agenda; actively obtaining external grants to support research and elevate graduate programs; working with diverse student populations; chairing and serving on masters and doctoral committees; and working collaboratively with early childhood programs and colleagues on and off campus. The successful candidate should have extensive funding and research in teacher education.

Minimum qualifications:

- Doctorate (Ph.D. or Ed.D.) in an appropriate field with specialization in Early Childhood/ELLs and Biliteracy development;
- A history of demonstrated success in obtaining external funding, including grants and contracts, serving as Principal Investigator or Co-Principal Investigator;
- Strong scholarship record in English Language Learners and Biliteracy development at the early childhood level;
- A record of teaching, research, and professional experiences with curriculum and instruction with emphasis in position areas; and
- Demonstrated excellence in teaching and advising graduate and undergraduate students at the higher education level.

The responsibilities of the position include: Teaching early childhood education (ECE) and literacy and language courses at graduate and undergraduate levels; developing and maintaining an active research and publication agenda; actively obtaining external grants to support research and elevate graduate programs; working with diverse student populations; chairing and serving on masters and doctoral committees; and working collaboratively with early childhood programs and colleagues on and off campus. In addition, the successful candidate is expected to work closely with faculty members in the areas of ESL and literacy education.

Appointment: This is a nine-month appointment with an anticipated start date of Fall 2016; summer teaching opportunities are available. The salary and start-up funds are competitive and commensurate with experience.

Application: Send electronic and hard copy letter of application or nomination, curriculum vitae, two sample articles, and names and contact information of three references to the attention of Drs. Radhika Viruru or Zohreh Eslami, Search Committee Co-Chairs at the following address:
